Prioritising 'business risk' is critical, warns Pentura

Pentura become the UK's first Risk Management Service Provider

Infosec 2008: - Pentura, a leading IT security consultancy, has today become the UK's first Risk Management Service Provider, capable of identifying and prioritising the risks posed to critical business systems and processes within organisations.

Providing a unique visibility of the threats faced by IT systems, Pentura offer a risk advisory service that highlights system vulnerabilities, data leakage risks and penetration threats, in addition to implementing, monitoring and managing corporate IT systems.

Steve Smith, Managing Director of Pentura comments "Any IT consultancy can list the high number of security risks corporate IT departments face. However the ability to identify and analyse each risk and prioritise individual threats that could impact critical business systems and the companies key operations, offers genuine strategic insight."

Smith continues, "IT managers are increasingly made to justify their actions to both their board of directors and company auditors. By identifying the business risks facing the organisation, then building the business case based on a strategic risk management framework, IT managers are able to justify their decision making and investments from a legal and corporate perspective."

Visit Pentura at Infosec 2008 on Stand G185 between 22nd - 24th April to find out more.
